

Eating Places

David Cristiani

One can really work up an appetite while looking for great landscapes or plants! I even get tired and hungry hearing certain politicians and even green industry people suggest more bad ideas. For a satisfying meal or just a break from life that won't cost too much, I have had many a good gastronomic experience at the following places, best for the types of cuisine noted (please consult a phonebook for addresses, times, etc):

**Note*

- 1) Do not expect too many foods that are infused, encrusted, and/or otherwise trendy at most of the places listed; if a restaurant serves a category of food not noted, there may be better places to enjoy it. If it has a ?, it is marginal but OK.
- 2) Note how few restaurants listed DO NOT offer outdoor dining in an appealing, regionally appropriate landscape, even though their climate makes that idea perfect. Imagine how al fresco dining in a well-designed setting could set them apart from other places! If you own one of these restaurants, why are you missing out on that other untapped aspect of your dining experience?
